

Andreas Persianis

Andreas Persianis graduated from Cambridge University in 1986 with an undergraduate (MA Honours) degree in engineering. He subsequently completed an MBA in Finance at Wharton Business School in 1989.

From 1989 he was a management consultant at Bain & Company, the second largest management consultancy in the world with headquarters in Boston, leaving as Senior Manager in 1994. Assignments included strategic development, mergers & acquisitions, advisory and business reengineering for FTSE 100 companies. He is the founder (1994) and managing director of Centaur Financial Services, a regulated discretionary management firm initially in the UK and now in Cyprus. The firm manages funds for private individuals and institutions. He was appointed as non-executive member of the CBC Board in February 2014.
